EXPLANATORY.

BY authorization of the Legislature of Connecticut the Adjutant-General has prepared a new catalogue of the men from this State who served in the Union cause during the war of the Rebellion. This has been prepared in the most careful manner, the records of this State and of the departments in Washington being thoroughly searched for information. The result is the most complete and accurate roster that is possessed by any State. The expense has been very great, certainly not less than $50,000. An edition of only 2,500 copies was authorized, so that the cost to the State has been not less than twenty dollars a volume.

While the work was going through the press it occurred to certain officers — Rev. (Gen.) Erastus Blakeslee being entitled to the credit of the first suggestion — that some way ought to be devised to make these valuable records accessible to individuals who would not be able to obtain a copy of the complete work. Permission was obtained to have printed a few extra copies of each organization, the expense being undertaken by the gentlemen interested. Unfortunately, before the project had taken shape, the rosters of several of the earlier organizations had already been printed, and the type distributed. The expense of resetting the type would have been so great that it was not attempted. But, beginning with the Cavalry, there have been printed extra copies of the official records of every organization, precisely as they appear in the complete volume.

The expense involved has been considerable, and the copies are offered at as low a price as will cover the outlay and risk. It enables every survivor to possess a complete official record of his old company and regiment, which he can obtain in no other available manner.

The gentlemen who have assumed the responsibility are: L. A. Dickinson (12th C. V.), Hartford; Judge A. B. Beers (6th C. V.), Bridgeport; J. C. Kinney (13th C. V.), Hartford.

HISTORY

TWELFTH REGIMENT C. V. INFANTRY.

WRITTEN BY GENERAL L. A. DICKINSON, LATE CAPTAIN COMPANY C, TWELFTH CONNECTICUT VOLUNTEERS.

THE Twelfth Regiment Connecticut Volunteers was recruited at Hartford, and was known as "The Charter Oak Regiment." It was organized as a part of the "New England Division" which Major-General B. F. Butler was authorized by the Secretary of War, September 16, 1861, to raise for special service. The Hon. Henry C. Deming, then Mayor of Hartford, was selected by General Butler to be its Colonel, and Ledyard Colburn, who had served as Major of the Second Regiment (three months troops), was appointed Lieutenant-Colonel. At a later date, January 20, 1862, Frank H. Peck of New Haven, became its Major.

The recruits for the regiment began going into camp November 11, 1861, when the nucleus of four companies reported. The camp was named "Camp Lyon," and was located in West Hartford, about two miles west of the State House, near Farmington Avenue. Here, in Sibley tents and upon snow-covered ground, the regiment was fully recruited, equipped, and drilled, until its departure from the State on the 24th of February, 1862. It numbered ten hundred and eight (1,008) men, and left for the front in an advanced state of drill and discipline, sailing from New York, February 27th, on the steamship "Fulton," and arriving at Ship Island, Miss., March 8th. The regiment was assigned to a brigade commanded by Brigadier-General John W. Phelps, and remained at Ship Island until April 16th, when it embarked on board the ship "E. Wilder Farley," bound for the Mississippi River, and lay in that river just below Forts Jackson and St. Phillip several days, awaiting the result of Admiral Farragut's attack on those forts. After their capture, two companies of the regiment were landed and ordered into Fort Jackson, the first Union troops to occupy the captured forts. Before others could be landed, news of the capture of New Orleans changed General Butler's plans, and the two companies were at once re-embarked and the regiment ordered to proceed to that city, where it arrived April 30th, the first Union regiment to appear before New Orleans. It was landed the next day, and went into camp in Lafayette Square.

On the 5th of May the regiment, with its brigade, went to occupy an extensive earthwork known as "Fort John Morgan," situated about ten miles above New Orleans, built by the Confederates as one of the defenses of that city. After its occupation by the Union forces it was named "Camp Parapet." The regiment here was under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Colburn, Colonel Deming having been detached to act as Mayor of New Orleans.

The regiment remained at this point through the summer. While here an expedition consisting of five companies of the regiment and a section of Holcomb's Second Vermont Battery, all under command of Major Frank H. Peck, was sent on the United States gunboat "Grey Cloud," Commander Buchanan, its object being to destroy railroad bridges and break up camps of mounted rangers and bushwhackers, said to be located at several points in Mississippi. The expedition sailed July 25th, destroying bridges at Pass Manchac and North Pass, thence through Lakes Pontchartrain and Borgne, up Pearl River, landing at Covington, Louisburg, Madisonville, Pass Christian, and other points. Having accomplished its object, it returned to Camp Parapet, after an absence of ten days, with but little loss.

On the 29th of September the regiment was transferred to the "Reserve Brigade" commanded by Brigadier-General Godfrey Weitzel, and went into "Camp Kearney," at Carrollton.

October 24th the brigade, consisting of four regiments of infantry, two batteries, and four troops of cavalry, left Carrollton on transports on an expedition to dislodge the Confederate forces under General Dick Taylor, who occupied the La Fourche district. They were found posted at Georgia Landing, on both sides of La Fourche Bayou. The attack was made October 27th, and the enemy dislodged after a sharp fight. The Twelfth distinguished itself in this affair — its first engagement — and was highly complimented by General Weitzel for its steadiness under fire. Its losses were nineteen killed, wounded, and missing. The enemy having been dispersed, the brigade went into camp near Thibodeaux. While here Lieutenant-Colonel Colburn was detached to act as Superintendent of the New Orleans & Opelousas Railroad, leaving Major Peck in command of the regiment.

In January, 1863, the brigade, with an increased force, proceeded up the Teche River to destroy the rebel gunboat "Cotton," which was attacked on the 14th. Infantry, artillery, cavalry, and gunboats were engaged on both sides. The "Cotton" was destroyed and the enemy dispersed, and the brigade returned to Thibodeaux.

March 27th, Company A, under command of Lieutenant William S. Bulkley, with other troops, on board the gunboat "Diana," was captured on the Teche, near Pattersonville, after a sharp and gallant fight. The enemy, taking possession of the "Diana," paroled the enlisted men and sent the officers as prisoners to Texas. Company A lost in the affair seven men killed and wounded.

April 9th a large force, under command of Major-General Nathaniel P. Banks, crossed Berwick Bay, and proceeding via the Atchafalaya and Teche, found General Taylor strongly posted behind entrenchments at Centerville, supported by gunboats. The engagement began on the 13th, lasting two days, when the enemy retired in the night. The Twelfth, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Peck, was actively and creditably engaged, its losses being fifteen killed and wounded. On the 14th of April General Banks started in pursuit of the retreating enemy, and with occasional skirmishing reached Opelousas, La., on the 20th, where the regiment was placed on picket duty for several days. On the 4th of May it joined in the advance on Alexandria on the Red River, ninety-six miles distant, reaching that city on the 7th, and on the 9th marched thirty-six miles up the river to Piney Woods, returning to Alexandria on the 12th, where it remained on provost duty until the 17th. It then marched to Simsport, on the Atchafalaya River, and proceeded on transport "Laurel Hill" to St. Francisville, Bayou Sara, above Port Hudson, reaching the latter place May 25th. On the 27th it joined in the general attack on that stronghold, driving the enemy from its front into their last line of entrenchments, silencing four pieces of artillery, and reaching the parapet of the enemy's earthworks, when the brigade was withdrawn and replaced by another. The regiment falling back, took position about 150 yards from the earthworks of the enemy, where, under cover of hastily constructed breastworks, it remained under continuous fire, doing duty as sharpshooters until the surrender of Port Hudson, July 8, 1863. During this period the regiment took part in two general attacks on the enemy, June 10th and 14th. Its losses during the forty-two days under fire at Port Hudson were 108 killed and wounded, and the regiment was frequently complimented by General Weitzel and others for its staying and fighting qualities.

After the fall of Port Hudson, the regiment was sent by transports to Donaldsonville, thence to New Orleans, and from that city via the Gulf of Mexico to Brashear City, on Berwick Bay. Accompanied by gunboats, it arrived July 25th, and with the Thirteenth Connecticut occupied that post, Lieutenant-Colonel Peck being in command. While here the regiment was seriously reduced by sickness and malaria, which so greatly incapacitated both officers and men that it was difficult to find enough of either to perform the daily duty required.

On the 2d of September the regiment went to Algiers, opposite New Orleans, to prepare to join an expedition against Galveston, Texas, under Major-General William B. Franklin. The transport selected for the regiment was found to be unseaworthy, and before another could be procured, news of the failure of the enterprise was received — the gunboats accompanying the expedition having been captured at Sabine Pass. In October the regiment, with its brigade and a large force under General Franklin, penetrated the western part of Louisiana, reaching Opelousas. Remaining in that section until late in the fall, it returned to New Iberia and went into winter quarters. In February, 1864, a large percentage of the regiment re-enlisted as veterans, the first regiment in the Department of the Gulf to take that step; and in March it was sent home to Connecticut to enjoy its veteran furlough.

May found it again in Louisiana on provost duty at Carrollton, from whence it was ordered to Morganzia and attached to the Second Brigade, First Division, Nineteenth Army Corps, Brigadier-General McMillen commanding. In July the regiment, with the Nineteenth Corps, was sent to Fortress Monroe, Va., thence to Bermuda Hundred, remaining there but two days, when it was sent to Washington, D. C., and on the 7th of August the corps became a portion of the army commanded by Major-General P. H. Sheridan in the Shenandoah Valley. The regiment had traveled over 5,000 miles in a period of three months.

The Twelfth participated in all the battles fought by General Sheridan in that glorious campaign, distinguishing itself in each one, particularly at Opequan and Winchester September 19th, and at Cedar Creek October 19th. At Opequan Colonel Frank H. Peck was mortally wounded while gallantly leading the regiment into action, and the command devolved upon Captain Sidney E. Clark, Company F — Lieutenant-Colonel Lewis being absent from the effect of a wound received at Port Hudson. Captain Clark handled the regiment in a highly satisfactory manner. At one time in the afternoon the Twelfth regiment and the Eighth Vermont, Colonel Stephen Thomas, were alone at the front. The regiments on their right and left being withdrawn to make new dispositions, the position was critical in the extreme. The Eighth Corps on the extreme right of the Union line was just coming into action, turning the left flank of the enemy, and the crisis had come. The Twelfth with the Eighth Vermont, under the lead of Colonel Thomas, with a mighty rush made a bayonet charge, shivering the enemy's line in their front to atoms, silencing a battery, and sending the foe in disorder back on Winchester. The loss of the regiment in that engagement was seventy-one killed and wounded.

September 25th it was again engaged at Fisher's Hill, occupying an important position. At Cedar Creek, October 19th, led by Lieutenant-Colonel Lewis, who had joined a few days previous, the regiment bore a conspicuous part, being engaged at close quarters, "where bayonets dripped blood and skulls were broken by clubbed muskets."

Surrounded at one time, it stood steadily to its work, and with its companion regiments of the Second Brigade, then under command of Colonel Thomas, held at bay the victorious divisions of Gordon and Kershaw, and with colors floating defiantly fought its way to the rear, to again, later in the day, with depleted ranks, join in the grand charge that swept the enemy as an army from the valley. The loss of the regiment in this terrific battle was one hundred and seventy killed, wounded, and captured.

The battle of Cedar Creek ended the fighting days of the regiment, that action being the last general engagement in which it participated. In consequence of the severe losses of the regiment in battle, by death from disease, and the muster-out at the end of term of service of those who did not re-enlist as veterans, the regiment was, on the 2d of December, 1864, consolidated into a battalion of six companies, under Special Order No. 95, Headquarters Middle Military Division, November 26, 1864.

The campaign in the Shenandoah Valley ended, the battalion went into winter quarters at Summit Point, Va., remaining in the valley until April 30, 1865, when it went to Washington, D. C., and participated in the Grand Review in that city, May 23d. On the 1st of June the battalion went by transport to Savannah, Ga., remaining there until August 12th, when it was mustered out. It was then sent to Hartford, Conn., where on the 22d of August, 1865, it was paid off and discharged, having been in service three years and nine months since its organization.

The record of the regiment, from its muster-in to its discharge from service, was one that every living member may be proud of. Its flag was always to the front, and bears upon it an honorable record. No act of the regiment ever tarnished its fame or left a blemish on its escutcheon.
